

Declaring "that kindness costs no little, yet pays so much that it is a treasured pearl of great price," Rev. Carl V. Roop of the First United Brethren church preached last night to a large congregation at the union services at Salem Evangelical church. His subject, "What I Must Do To Be Blessed," was taken from the Beatitudes.

Rev. Roop conducted the entire service, offering the prayers and presiding.

He spoke in part as follows:

"For every blessing there is a promise based on condition. When the conditions are met, the promise is assured and the blessing comes. A disconnecting link can readily eliminate the promise and destroy the blessing."

"The poor in spirit are blessed and promised the Kingdom of Heaven because they are humble, surrendered and consecrated, not beautiful, proud or counting on their own self-sufficiency."

"The meek are called the children of God because they have the principles of peace in their hearts. These principles are loving peace, seeking diligently and constantly to follow peace with all men and subjecting daily by God's grace to subdue the warring elements of hate in their own hearts."

SECURITIES AGAIN IN FORWARD MOVEMENT

Lending Stocks Up Despite Light Volume; Bonds Make Moderate Progress.

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The securities markets moved forward again today, although trading was of a more restrained character than it had been in several days.

Despite the light volume, leading stocks moved about $1 to $4 a share higher, and bonds made moderate progress. A firm tone in the wheat market, and steadiness of cotton, helped the movement in securities.

Notable in the advance, which was marked by occasional moderate waves of profit taking. When Dupont announced a reduction in its quarterly dividend to 50 cents from 75, that issue lost a $2 rise, and several others receded moderately, but the list stiffened again later. Another moderate selling wave appeared in the early afternoon, which took a few stocks off moderately from the lead.

The turnover in the first two hours of trading was only about 700,000 shares, or approximately 1,000,000 under the turnover in the like period on Saturday.

dence in Soundness of U. S. Coin Is Seen by Ayres as Source of Hopeful Turn in Trade Sentiment.

something like a reversal in business sentiment.
In fact, he said, "It would be pleasant and easy to infer that the bottom of the great depression had been passed, that the corner had been turned, and that from now on the processes of recovery will prevail."
"Warning of Over-Confidence."
But he cautioned against over-confidence and declared "A more prudent" thought "should lead us to inquire what economic forces are behind the brighter outlook."
"The immediate cause of this recent improvement," he said, "is not far to seek. It consists of a renewed confidence in the fundamental soundness of our dollar."
"From early last autumn to the beginning of this summer, both Americans and foreigners had been discussing the possibility of a sudden decrease in the value of our dollar, either through our abandoning the gold basis for our currency or through a deliberate decrease in its value brought about by legislation and designed to stimulate business."
"During those months the gold reserves of our banks suffered severe shrinkage as the citizens of other countries hurriedly withdrew their American holdings. Then in June came the announcement that the gold drain had come to an end because the foreign balances here had been almost completely withdrawn."
"At about the same time both our great political parties adopted platforms pledging their support to sound money principles. Finally congress adjourned without enacting any serious inflationary legislation. The prompt consequence of these developments was a general relief from fear concerning the soundness of the dollar, a universal betterment of sentiment, and a notable series of price recoveries."
"Questioning the advisability of governmental efforts to force business recovery through stimulation in peace times, Ayres said that "millions of business men are seeking in every way known to them to resume business activity. All they ask or need is the opportunity to go forward."
"Hoarding Greatest Problem."
"The lessons of the past clearly indicate that they will gain that opportunity rather through the removal of barriers that now block them than because of great governmental expenditures designed to stimulate business into such a pitch of activity as will overcome the barriers."
"Money hoarding, Ayres said, had created the nation's greatest credit problem. He estimated that "we now have... more than a thousand million dollars of hoarded currency," and added "this is a matter that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation can control."
"It can do it by adopting a policy that will not permit any more bank failures during the period of this emergency unless they result from defalcations... A policy that would in fact terminate bank suspensions without guaranteeing bank deposits would probably do more to help business recovery than all the stimulation projects that have been proposed."

Looking Back to 1932

(Conversations of the future)

"Oh, to have bought this chair at 1932 Prices!"

"How they sold furniture at such low prices... I'll never be able to understand! How they put so much style and quality into these dining and living room suites that I needed so badly even then. I could have saved $65 if I hadn't been so foolish!"

"I'm sorry I didn't take advantage of more of those bargain prices of 1932. As I think back I wonder why so many of us failed to put our money to work for us in such a profitable manner. Buying opportunities that probably will never occur again."

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday Aug. 15

A VERY interesting and intriguing forecast is based on the energies that appear in this day's lunar and mutual activities. A change of radical importance is shown, with new environment, travel and probable change of occupation. Although there may be many disturbances, petty anxieties and irritations, the general trend may be toward a stabilizing of the fortunes in new and untried lines or projects. With care and wise direction these fresh ventures may be surprisingly happy and successful.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of quite unforeseen adventures or experiences, that will exert influence of radical importance on their future lives. Change in surroundings and occupation, involving travel, new friends, and many personal readjustments, even if attended by petty annoyances, anxieties and vexations, may tend to stabilize their fortunes. Meantime they must beware extravagance and gossip. A child born on this day will be versatile, keen and original in thought and action, but ambitious, prodigious and fond of show, unless given early training in frugality.

FLASHES OF LIFE

By The Associated Press

BALTIMORE—Ming Toy, chow dog, has set out to show a judge he made no mistake when he decided recently a death sentence imposed on her for biting people. Fire broke out in a barn where 30 dogs were confined. Ming Toy, in a kennel nearby, gnawed her leather harness, jumped a fence and awakened an attendant who saved 37 of the dogs.

SEASIDE CITY, N. J. — August M. Egert Jr., who got through the World War all right, was killed by the wing of a B-26 bomber on the head he developed an infection while three operations failed to cure.

CINCINNATI — Sun tan lamps soothe the nerves of quack bees, experts find. Results: 30 per cent more eggs and honey—and an angelic instead of a shrewish disposition.

NEW YORK — Because he has led his blind master to glory at Columbia university for three summers, Seattle, a college student, is the "dog of the year." His name, W. K. Beckett, of Franklin, Neb., will be presented when he gets his medal from the anti-convulsion society.

DETROIT — Helen L. Schick, 27, has divorced her wife. They were married in India when he was nine and she was eight.

My Beauty Hint

BY MARIE DRESSLER

IF the saying is true that the first hundred years are the hardest then the 60-year-olds (like myself) are fast coming into their own.

What a relief it is—after years of effort to appear beautiful—to sit back in our mellow age and rest from our labors. However, some elderly women don't appreciate this period of ease, and continue to struggle with exterior beauty methods— not realizing that our beauty comes from within.

They go about with gayly made-up faces that only emphasize their lost youth. They dash their lips with red and strive to hide their wrinkles by surgical methods—giving artificial reflections in place of middle-aged contentment.

To them I would suggest a comely relaxation—a passing on of the paint pots to the young generation—a relying on good old soap and water with a bit of powder for their beauty needs. By shedding our struggles, we have an opportunity of being natural—and naturalness and simplicity is youthful.

MADAME RACKETEER TO SHOW AT PALACE THEATER FOR 3 DAYS

The moving picture people have left the gangster in the background for a time and are concentrating on the women of the shady occupations in "Madame Racketeer," the picture which will show at the Palace Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Allison Skipworth, one of the best character actresses of the entertainment world, plays the role of the feminine racketeer. Another actor whose acting talents are many, Richard Bennett, supports Miss Skipworth. Bennett, aside from his name as an actor, also has the distinction of being the father of Constance, Joan and Barbara, who is Mrs. Morton Downey.

George Raft, who made a big stride towards stardom in "Scarface," and Evelyn Knapp, who recently recovered from a long seige in a hospital, have important roles.

GOOD FAMILY PICTURE AT OHIO THREE DAYS

One of the nicest, homiest pictures you'll ever want to see is "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which will close Wednesday at the Ohio. Marion Linn lends a spontaneity to the role of "Rebecca," that is charming, and Ralph Bellamy is as well as "Dr. Ladd," the young man who understands and loves the little girl who has to live at the "white house" with her two maiden aunts, Mae Marsh and Louise Closser Hale. And Miss Hale's role "Aunt Miriam" is so well done that you'll alternately hate and love the old woman who is loathe to finally admit that she loves the little girl whose ways are so unlike her own. Miss Marsh is good as "Aunt Jane," whose ways are not always the ways of her sister sister, "Rebecca" leaves her home at Sunnybrook farm to live with her aunts, who can give her an education and help her family. She gets into hot water the first thing by bringing along the child of the village's "outcasts." From then on, "Rebecca" has a struggle to win her aunts. The story is simply told, and the picture is one that every one from grandma to the 6-year-old in the family will enjoy immensely. An animated cartoon comedy, newspaper and an organogue complete the program. H. H.

"SEA GHOST" AT MARION TWO DAYS

The Marion will show "Sea Ghost," for two days, Tuesday and Wednesday. In the cast are Laura LaPlante, Alan Hale and Claude Allister. The "Oh, I say, oh, I say," English actor, Miss LaPlante has not been seen a great deal since talking pictures revolutionized the art of screen acting.

“Heart of a Wife”
BY ADELE GARRISON

Was It a Woman That Left the Messages for Marion Under the Candles at the Theatre, or Was It a Man Disguised?

THE mistress of the mountain glen looked intently at me as she told me that my name was on the tiny pad of Chinese paper she had taken from the pewter candlestick I had just bought. There was a certain wariness in her manner, slight but definable, that told me she was on guard.

I could not blame her. In these various times, fraught with so many sinister happenings, so many murky undercurrents, all of us suspect the unusual, wait until it has been proved innocent before we accept it.

In my teaching days, and later in my war work, it was part of my business to judge faces and eyes. I looked steadily at Mrs. Merton, and decided that she was trustworthy and that, like the alert, reticent New England ancestor I was sure were hers she could—and would—keep a confidence if she were given one. There was no other way out, anyway. I could not take the Chinese papers from her without some explanation, and it might as well be the truth.

The Story Is Told

"The papers are a message to me," I told her quietly, and at her gaze of astonishment I motioned her to a chair at the table we had just left.

"Sit down and let me tell you about it," I said, and when, with calm eyes still fixed on my face, she sat down opposite me, I outlined for her as rapidly as possible the sinister events of the last few days, ending with the mysterious telephone messages of the Chinese that had sent me to the tea room to buy the "little horse" candlestick.

When I had finished, she did not speak for a long minute, but her eyes no longer searched my face. They were fixed upon her shapely, capable hands lying inert in her lap. I did not need words from her to tell me that she had accepted my story—and me—and that I was no longer on trial to her mind.

A Careful Check

But she was puzzled about something. I could see that. And when she lifted her head and called "Ellery! Please come here!" I felt a little shiver of trepidation run down my spine. Would I perhaps be able to find a clue in this secluded spot that would aid in unraveling the mystery surrounding the kidnapping of Marion and Carolyn?

Her voice had been raised only a trifle above its usual tone, but her husband's answer had been at once:

"Yes, Dora, coming." And the next instant he was advancing toward me.

"Do you mind if I tell him?" Mrs. Merton asked in a low voice. "He has an awfully keen mind when he's up before anything like this, and he won't talk any more than I will. You can depend upon both of us."

"I am sure of that," I told her. "Tell him, by all means." In three minutes Mr. Merton was as fully acquainted with the kidnapping case as I was.

The Iron Fist.

The iron fist once more is Germany's symbol of security. A cabinet of monarchist sympathizers has decreed the death penalty for all persons convicted of political acts of violence. The men who have taken the responsibility for building Germany anew will employ a tried and true method.

Italy uses it successfully. Soviet Russia does not hesitate to exact the death penalty from enemies of the state. In no other way can government sustain itself in restive populations, torn internally by factionalism. There must be the fear of penalty before there can be order.

In the United States, where faith in democracy continues strong despite the adversity that government by the people has encountered, there is no reason for a state-wielded iron fist. Fortunately, there is little need for recourse to such an extreme measure. Americans remain reasonably orderly because they continue to have hope in a brighter future.

They believe they can satisfy their instinctive demand for leadership strong enough to keep order with the improved operation of the democratic system. Those who suggest possibilities of dictatorship, furthermore, have nothing in common with those regimes abroad under which human life necessarily is sacrificed to impress the people with the hopelessness of opposing them.

It does not follow, necessarily, that public opinion in this country condemns Germany's revived use of the iron fist. Intelligence concedes the point that a nation in disorder may be able to restore security by fighting terrorism with its own devices. Remembering the natural inclination of a confused population for strong leadership, the open-minded observer of Germany's latest move to control its political passions will be inclined to believe that a proper step has been taken. It may be a step away from ideal democracy, but it is a step toward national security.

Financial Statement.

Stockholders would chatter with fear if they were to be handed a financial statement like Uncle Sam issues to his shareholders 12 times a year. Nevertheless, their faith is unshaken; they have confidence in the federal taxing power, much as they complain about manifestations of that power.

When the books were closed July 31, the United States had piled up a deficit of $245,790,620 for the first month of the new fiscal year. There are powerful governments abroad which would consider that sum a formidable deficit for a full year's operation. It did not frighten the United States.

Equipped with a so-called billion-dollar tax bill and assured of a two-billion dollar bill, if and when necessary, Americans were confident that everything would come out all right. Had not congress balanced the budget for the fiscal year? It was only a matter of waiting until revenue started to pour in.

Even the possibility that revenue from the new tax may not come up to expectations does not frighten Americans. They accept without much question predictions that the short session of congress will find it necessary to levy still higher taxes, but that they will be collectable is accepted as certain.

Temporary Setback.

An automobile trip isn't ruined by an unexpected flat tire at the start; neither will progress toward better county government be stopped by failure to meet with success in the first attempt to carry through the initiative process. One hundred and ninety-six thousand signatures were needed; the petition which would have placed the home rule amendment on the ballot lacked 22,900 of having enough.

In the more or less haphazard way the petition was circulated the people of Ohio became familiar with the purpose of a home rule amendment. Opposition was almost conspicuously absent; that Ohio is convinced of the wisdom of allowing counties to govern themselves in accordance with their needs is an assured fact. That Ohio soon will adopt a constitutional amendment permitting reorganization of county government, where desired, is no less an assured fact.

It is a matter of time and money. Before 1933 and the election day it will bring there must be a concentrated drive to obtain a sufficient number of names on the petition to initiate action on a home rule amendment. Money will be required; only $9,000 was spent this year, in contrast to the usual sum, which is 12 times as much. The fact that so much was done with so little effort indicates the dead certainty that Ohio will start to bring county government up to date just as soon as it can overcome its inertia.

Indisputable Facts.

Keen-eyed and nimble-witted gentlemen who make a business of telling people about their probably political reactions to certain stimuli have been saying that better conditions between July and November would give Herbert Hoover the reelection he seeks. Their prophecies have been heard respectfully.

Democrats have a disturbing report to make, however. Consider a statement by W. A. Julian, Democratic national committeeman from this state. After a talk with James A. Farley, national Democratic chairman, Mr. Julian informed the press that "the reason for the present reaction in economic conditions and manifestation of a growing restoration of confidence on the part of the people is due to the realization that Governor Roosevelt is going to be elected president."

Does this mean, then, that the Democratic candidate, by making conditions better, is going to elect the Republican candidate? Or does it mean that the people will forget all about Herbert Hoover between now and November and go marching in the polls with but one name in mind—Franklin D. Roosevelt? To which man should they show more gratitude—the one who kept the country afloat for four long years or the one who, according to his friends' claims, caused them to drift into a favorable current?

Politically, it is a puzzling situation. Rumor gives Republicans credit for starting an artificial boom to protect a Republican president. Propaganda gives Democrats credit for nominating a man who has such complete command of the people's confidence that his presence in the presidential race dispels their fears. Common sense warns that neither Republicans nor Democrats had anything to do with it, but common sense is notoriously a weak sister in the presence of Demos Rumor and Propaganda.

With so many conflicting and indisputable facts to help them make up their minds and mark their ballots the people scarcely can be blamed for being suspicious of everything and filled with a determination to sit tight until some one's bluff is called.

Lazy Days.

Rarely does a youngster get through a grade school without having it impressed on his mind not once but many times that the superiority of people living in the temperate zones is largely a matter of temperature. Because changing seasons, alternating heat, mild weather and winter keep the temperature cozy on his toes he gets further along than his lazy brother of the tropics or his other lazy brother of the frigid zones.

It all comes back in sort of a rosy haze on a lazy August afternoon. There are recollections of an impulse to ask teacher if temperate zones were any better off than tropic zones just because they lived in a climate that made it more difficult for them to sit down and rest, waiting for and healthy meanwhile on a diet of free bananas. But like many questions it never came up for discussion.

Probably the right place in the tropics wouldn't be so hard on a person who wasn't too lazy. There probably are tropical afternoons something like said August afternoons when everything slows down and everyone watches it without worrying about efficiency. Voices are lowered. Pulled shades indicate many slumbers going on. There is a snuffling process to and from the drinking fountain. In the air is the muffled stillness peculiar to midsummer. There is an impression of seasons hovering between summer and autumn—a vague impression because it's too peaceful to be taken seriously.

Teacher didn't mention mid-August and the effect it had on human ambition back in grade school. It probably wouldn't have been good pedagogy to warn children that there were times ahead of them when, for purposes of productive work, they would be of no more value than their slothful brethren of the tropics.

Comment of the Press

NEW USES FOR OLD AUTOS.

Contrary to a common belief all American autos do not come to a final resting place in the junk yard of decay in second hand parts. Thousands of them are disassembled annually and shipped to all parts of the world where their service goes on in many ways.

The materials made from these decrepit motor cars include slats for military's cots, wearing apparel, pillows and mattresses, tools, furniture, tobacco pouches and water buckets.

Even in the sampans on far off Chinese rivers parts of the old flivver once seen on some American road keep on. The motors are linked into a new usefulness and made to furnish auxiliary power for the river craft.

According to the United States department of commerce many of these motors are used in Canadian forests to operate small sawmills.

The department report shows that next to the engines the further use of old tires excites the lively interest of economical minded folks in foreign countries.

The inner tubes become floats for swimmers on many beaches. The old casings are employed as bumpers on wharves and boats. But a great part of these shipments of old tires to foreign countries goes into the making of footgear.

The increasing scarcity and greater cost of leather in some countries has brought old rubber into popularity. It is said that in some parts of the Balkan states shoes made from old American tires are sold for 60 cents. The peasants in these countries are in sorry straits and the opportunity to get serviceable footwear at low cost is eagerly accepted.

A Brazilian manufacturer has been making reducing corsets from perforated inner tubes that once did their duty on the car of some American family. Old tires are being converted into artistic and very serviceable doormats.—Toledo Times.

FEDERAL AID NOT A GIFT.

The impression so many have that something for nothing is had in federal aid is not warranted by the facts. The biggest item in government aid is the $400,000,000 for highway construction under the plan of matching dollars with the states.

All the revenue which makes possible federal aid of every description is raised by taxes. The distribution is varying dissatisfaction in about a third of the states which, because they are more prosperous, pay by far the largest portion of the amount distributed. Some states are deriving back in aid five times the amount they pay into the national treasury, while others pay in from five to 20 times the amounts they receive in return.

This question as to aid and distribution is directing much attention in the senate and the fairness of the plan. It is not wholly a national question for here in Ohio it is being raised in the larger and more wealthy counties. Hamilton making the loudest protest because it pays into the state treasury more than it receives in return.—Youngstown Vindicator.

AND THE FACES THEY MAKE.

Henry Ford says: "The newspapers are not the people." He is right one hundred percent. For the newspapers to presume to hold any such responsibility would be ridiculous. They are merely the mirrors in which the people make faces. Toledo Blade.

MONIA WORKS OVER.

Here is a new story saying that in Colombia children and adults are being linder. Well it wouldn't be hard to do that in this country.—Alliance Review.

Leprosy Believed Hopeless, Now Proved Curable.

Although leprosy has been known for many centuries, its treatment has not been very satisfactory, and until recently the disease was considered practically hopeless. Hence it is gratifying to learn that many cases of leprosy are now responding to a new form of treatment.

The disease was misunderstood for many years. Indeed, it was not until 1871 that the causative germ was discovered. "Bacillus leprosy" is the germ that causes leprosy.

Contrary to common belief, leprosy is not highly contagious, actual contact with the leper being necessary for contraction of the disease. There are individuals, particularly doctors and missionaries, who have been closely associated with lepers for many years but have not taken the disease.

Since it is not always possible to maintain at home the extreme care and cleanliness of afflicted individuals that are essential, leper colonies have been established. In former years these were in isolated parts of the world and the unfortunate individual shipped there to prevent the spread of the disease was never expected to return and no effort was made to cure him. The only provision for the leper was a spot where he could live out a miserable existence and die.

Today there are model colonies for the care and study of this disease, and to those afflicted individual goes not with the thought of dying there, but with the knowledge that he will receive the best latest scientific treatment for leprosy with hope of a cure. Indeed, many have returned from these colonies completely cured of a disease that for centuries was considered incurable.

Isolation is still considered the best method of preventing the spread of leprosy, but unfortunately many individuals who have a mild form of leprosy are unaware of the affliction. In addition to
